

Professional Communication, MA

The Master of Arts in Professional Communication prepares students to work in communication intensive jobs, including social media management, user experience, advertising, public relations, professional writing, human resources, fundraising, event management, general management, training, and consulting, among other things. It fosters basic understanding of communication processes, including:

- Understanding of the major theoretical concepts and practical applications associated with the study of human communication
- The ability to conduct scientific research ethically and effectively, to interpret statistical information, and to assess its practical import for understanding communication in the world.
- Understanding of variables in communication situations, including the number (especially as it impacts interaction), background, interests, and values of participants; language, communication purposes, and contextual factors.
- Understanding of the implications of a multicultural world on appropriate and effective forms of communication.
- Understanding of how to adapt to variable communication situations for informative and persuasive purposes.
- Understanding of special forms of communication such as that related to advertising, public relations, social media, technical writing, and communication technology, among others.
- The ability to effectively produce and critically analyze persuasive messages.
