Graduate Certificate, Supply Chain Management

The Graduate Certificate in Supply Chain Management is a program that is designed to provide professional development for individuals pursuing careers in logistics and supply chain management with the federal government, government contractors, manufacturers, or service organizations. The program is designed for individuals possessing a bachelor degree in a field other than supply chain management. The certificate program consists of 15 semester hours. For students who are also interested in completing either the MS-Supply Chain Management or the MBA, a subset of the certificate courses may be used to satisfy some of the requirements within those programs. The required courses for the graduate certificate in Supply Chain Management include the following:
